AUSTRALIAN COMMAND & STAFF COURSE (RESERVE)
2009 FACTS SHEET v3

The Australian Command and Staff Course (Reserve) ACSC(R) consists of three modules:

Military History (MH). The module consists of a seminar and written assignments over a 12-month period involving the study of campaigns from different eras with an emphasis on research and analysis.

Command, Leadership and Training (CLT). The module consists of 16-day residential and distance learning phases involving the research, analysis and delivery of a unit training directive and command study.

Land Operations (LOps). The module consists of 16-day residential and distance learning phases involving the application of land operations at brigade level, within a divisional setting.

The ACSC(R) may be completed within a single 14-month period whereby officers are posted to ACSC. Otherwise, the course is generally completed part-time over two consecutive years while officers remain posted to their parent unit. Completion of ACSC(R) comprises approximately 35 days of residential course work (one three-day and two 16-day periods) and 51 days of distance education. Successful completion of the ACSC(R) will entitle graduates to use the post nominal, psc(r).
