

A CENTURY OF SERVICE: 100 YEARS OF THE AUSTRALIAN ARMY

CONTRIBUTORS

(Details as at time of publication)

Lieutenant General Peter Cosgrove was appointed Chief of Army in July 2000. Prior to taking up that position he was Commander of the International Force in East Timor (INTERFET).

Judy Costello joined the Army in the Queensland University Regiment in 1976 while a university student, and was commissioned in 1979. After a series of regimental postings she was promoted Lieutenant Colonel in 1996 and served in Officer Career Management before commanding 8 Signal Regiment of the 2nd Division in 1999-2000. A graduate of Reserve Command and Staff College courses and, as a civilian, of the Joint Services Staff College, she now serves as a Staff Officer on the Headquarters of the Division with specific responsibilities for Part Time Communications training. In civilian life she has worked in the departments of Defence, Veterans' Affairs, and Finance and Administration, where she is currently Branch Manager for Strategic Partnerships Branch, responsible for the management of a number of external service providers.

Chris Coulthard-Clark is the historian for post-1945 conflicts at the Australian War Memorial. He graduated from the Royal Military College, Duntroon, in 1972, and served in the Army until 1979, when he joined the Australian Public Service, serving successively in the departments of Defence, Foreign Affairs, and Prime Minister and Cabinet. He is a PhD graduate of the University of New South Wales, and is the author of more than twenty books, including A Heritage of Spirit: A biography of Major General Sir William Throsby Bridges KCB, CMG (1979), The Third Brother: The Royal Australian Air Force 1921-39 (1991), and The RAAF in Vietnam: Australian air involvement in the Vietnam War 1962-1975 (1995). His most recent publication is Australia's Military Map-Makers: The Royal Australian Survey Corps 1915-96 (2000).

Peter Dennis is professor of history at University College, University of New South Wales, Australian Defence Force Academy. Among his publications are (as joint author and editor) The Oxford Companion to Australian Military History (1995) and (as joint author), Emergency and Confrontation: Australian Military Operations in Malaya and Borneo, 1950-1966 (1996). Most recently he is the joint editor of the seven-volume series, 'The Australian Centenary History of Defence' (2001).

Michael Evans is a Senior Research Fellow in the Australian Army's Land Warfare Studies Centre, Duntroon. He did national service in the Rhodesian Army and later was a regular officer in the Zimbabwe Army where, with the rank of Major, he headed that army's war studies program. He is a graduate in history and war studies of the universities of Rhodesia, London and Western Australia, and has published a wide range of journal articles and papers on military history and contemporary strategy in Australia, Britain and the United States. His most recent publications include an eighty-fifth anniversary essay on Gallipoli, 'From Legend to Learning: Gallipoli and the Military Revolution of World War 1' (2000); a monograph, Developing Australia's Maritime Concept of Strategy: Lessons from the Ambon Disaster of 1942 (2000); and, as co-editor with Alan Ryan, The Human Face of Warfare: Killing, Fear and Chaos in Battle (2000).

Jeffrey Grey is associate professor of history at University College, University of New South Wales, Australian Defence Force Academy. A PhD graduate of the University of New South Wales, his many books on Australian military history include A Military History of Australia (2nd rev. edn, 1999), Up Top: The Royal Australian Navy in Southeast Asian Conflicts 1955-1972 (1998), Australian Brass: The Career of Lieutenant General Sir Horace Robertson (1992), and, as joint author, Emergency and Confrontation: Australian Military Operations in Malaya and Borneo, 1950-1966 (1996), and as joint editor and author, The Oxford

Companion to Australian Military History (1995). His latest book is The Australian Army (2001), vol I of 'The Australian Centenary History of Defence'. In 2000-02 he is the Major General Matthew B Horner Professor of Military Theory and Research at the US Marine Corps University, Quantico, Virginia.

Alan Gropman is Chairman of the Department of Grand Strategy and Mobilization at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, a graduate degree-granting war college for senior officials. From 1960 to 1969 he served in various flying assignments as a navigator and flight examiner navigator, accumulating 4000 flying hours and more than 670 missions in Vietnam. He earned, among other awards, the Defense Superior Service Medal, Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with Five Oak Leaf clusters, and Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm. He is a PhD graduate (1975) of Tufts University, and has taught at the US Air Force Academy. Between 1983 and 1986 he served as the Deputy Director of Air Force Plans for Planning Integration, at Headquarters United States Air Force, commanding five divisions. In 1986 he retired from the United States Air Force as a Colonel after 27 years commissioned service. His publications include The Air Force Integrates, 1945-1964 (1977, 1998), Air Power and the Airlift Evacuation of Kham Duc (1979), Mobilizing U.S. Industry in World War II (1996), The Big L: American Logistics in World War II (1997), as well as many chapters in anthologies.

David Horner is the professor of Australian defence history in the Strategic and Defence Studies Centre at the Australian National University. Born in 1948, he graduated from the Royal Military College, Duntroon, in 1969 and served as an infantry platoon commander in Vietnam in 1971. He had various regimental and staff appointments and in 1983 graduated from the Australian Army's Command and Staff College. From 1988, until he retired from the Army as a lieutenant colonel towards the end of 1990, he was member of the Directing Staff of the Joint Services Staff College. He is the author or editor of over twenty books on Australian military history, strategy and defence, including Crisis of Command (1978), High Command (1982), The Commanders (1984), SAS: Phantoms of the Jungle (1989), Duty First (1990), General Vasey's War (1992), The Gulf Commitment (1992), The Gunners (1995), Inside the War Cabinet (1996), Breaking the Codes (with Desmond Ball) (1998), Blamey: The Commander-in-Chief (1998), Defence Supremo: Sir Frederick Shedden and the Making of Australian Defence Policy (2000), and Making the Australian Defence Force (2001), vol. IV of 'The Australian Centenary History of Defence'. Professor Horner is the editor of the Australian Army's military history series, has been the historical consultant for various television programs and has lectured widely on military history and strategic affairs. As an Army Reserve colonel, he is Head of the Australian Army's Land Warfare Studies Centre.

Richard Reid is the historian for the Commemorations Branch of the Department of Veterans' Affairs. From 1983-1994 he worked in education and historical research at the Australian War Memorial. In 1993, Dr Reid was the Memorial's Executive Officer for the project that returned the remains of an Unknown Australian Soldier from the battlefields of France to the Memorial's Hall of Memory. He has also contributed widely to journals, educational kits and websites on the experience of Australians at war.

Alan Ryan is a Senior Research Fellow in the Australian Army's Land Warfare Studies Centre, Duntroon. Formerly he was Assistant Dean in the Colleges of Law and Arts at the University of Notre Dame, Western Australia, where he was senior lecturer in history, politics and law. From 1987 to 1991 Dr Ryan was the Australian Pembroke Scholar at Cambridge University, where he completed a doctorate on the history of international attempts to prevent war. Between 1981 and 1994 he served in the Australian Army Reserve and on attachment with the British Army. With Michael Evans he co-edited The Human Face of Warfare: Killing, Fear and Chaos in Battle (2000). Other recent works include: From Desert Storm to East Timor: Australia, the Asia Pacific and New-Age Coalition Operations (2000), The Way Ahead: Alternative Approaches to Integrating the Reserves in 'Total Force' Planning (1999), and Primary Risks and Primary Responsibilities: Australian Defence Force Participation in the International Force East Timor (2000). His most recent work, published by the LWSC, is Thinking Across Time: Concurrent Historical Analysis on Military Operations (2001).

Georgia C. Sadler, Captain, US Navy (Rtd), has extensive experience at the national level of the United States on military women's issues, intelligence and politico-military planning. During her 28 years in the Navy, she was the first woman faculty member at the US Naval Academy, the first woman intelligence briefer to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Head of Women's Programs for the Chief of Naval Operations. After retiring from the Navy, she became Director of the Women in the Military Project at the Women's Research and Education Institute in Washington, DC. Currently, she is the Chair of the Board of Directors of the Alliance for National Defense, an educational non-profit organisation that focuses on issues of importance to military women. Captain Sadler has a Masters in Public Administration from the University of Washington. She has testified before the US Congress and meets frequently with Pentagon officials. She has written a number of articles for the US Navy's professional journal and contributed chapters to two recent books on military women. Her expertise on military women is sought out by the American and international media, including major newspapers and magazines as well as television and radio programs.

Hugh Smith is associate professor of politics at University College, University of New South Wales, Australian Defence Force Academy. A graduate of the London School of Economics and the Australian National University, he joined the Faculty of Military Studies at the Royal Military College, Duntroon, in 1971 as a Lecturer in the Department of Government and transferred to ADFA in 1986. A Fellow of the Inter University Seminar on Armed Forces and Society since 1977, he was also Foundation Director of the Australian Defence Studies Centre from 1987 to 1991. He has taught numerous courses on strategy, ethics and war at undergraduate and postgraduate level and has published widely, particularly in the fields of armed forces and society, international politics and defence personnel issues.

Roger J. Spiller is the George C. Marshall Professor of Military History at the US Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. A PhD graduate of Louisiana State University (1977), he was a founding member of the Combat Studies Institute, becoming its director in 1990. In 1992 he was appointed Marshall Professor, and was also made Personal Historian to the Chief of Staff, US Army. Dr Spiller has written and lectured widely on contemporary military affairs and military history in governmental, academic and public venues. He was the general editor of the three volume Dictionary of American Military Biography and, most recently, Combined Arms in Action since 1939. He is a contributing editor to American Heritage and serves as a consultant to several university and public publishers, and is currently a consultant to the Public Broadcasting System's series, 'American Portrait'.

Peter Stanley is Principal Historian at the Australian War Memorial, where he has worked since 1980. His eleven books include The Remote Garrison (1986) (the first general history of the British Army in Australia), Tarakan: an Australian Tragedy (1997), and White Mutiny: British Military Culture in India (1998). He is currently working with Dr Mark Johnston on a study of Australians in the Battle of El Alamein.