

Interviewed Miss Olive Box on 18th February, 1992.

She states that she could not be sure of the date, but they had been to a Social at Yallabatharra School, arriving home after midnight ... may have been 1 o'clock. They went to bed and were awakened by explosions. The house they were living in (7 or 8 mile from the Coast) was an old stone house with walls about 18" (450 m.m) thick, and they could feel vibrations through the house with every explosion. On going outside they could see flashes from over the hill ... she could not remember how long they watched, but from memory it wasn't very long. The mailman called next day and they told him of their experience, which he must have reported to the Authorities, because some Army Personel came out and interviewed them.

The Compass Bearing of 265° was taken approximately 12' from North-West corner of the house to position over hill where flashes were seen.
