

AUSTRALIAN
DEFENCE FORCE

Australian Journal of Defence and Strategic Studies

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS (2021–2022)

The Australian Journal of Defence and Strategic Studies (AJDSS) is the flagship journal of the Australian Defence Force. The AJDSS encourages contributors and readers from across the professional military, academic, government and industry sectors. The AJDSS welcomes submissions considering contemporary and future concerns relevant to the defence and strategic outlook of Australia and the Indo-Pacific region.

Themes

The AJDSS is interested in receiving submissions on:

- the changing character of Australia's defence and security environment
- defence and security debates, including economic, political and climate change concerns, relevant to the Pacific region
- Australia's strategic approach to the use of space for Defence
- deterrence in contemporary statecraft and warfare
- defence responses to information and political warfare e.g. propaganda, disinformation and other influence operations and operating in the grey zone
- Australia's future defence strategy and operational concepts
- Defence and strategic implications of emerging technologies including artificial intelligence and automation, electronic warfare, surveillance and reconnaissance technology and data collection, and cyber security
- regional perspectives on geostrategic and geopolitical concerns.

The AJDSS also invites proposals from organisations conducting workshops, symposiums or conferences to submit a series of themed papers for our Focus section or a potential special issue.

See our website for more suggestions.

The AJDSS is an open access journal published twice annually by the Australian Department of Defence. It is available online or hard copies can be ordered via the Contact Us page on our website.
