Introduction

The purpose of this fact sheet is to provide information on leave arrangements and support available to Defence personnel affected by natural disaster emergencies and/or personnel who engage in voluntary emergency management activity.

Definitions

The Australian Public Service Commission advise in Circular 2016/5W that the Australian Emergency Manual defines a disaster as a serious disruption to community life, threatening death, injury or damage to property, which requires special mobilisation of state and territory resources.

An emergency is defined as an event, actual or imminent, which endangers or threatens to endanger life, property or the environment and which required significant and coordinated response.

How might Defence people be impacted by natural disasters?

Personnel may be personally impacted by natural disasters in a number of ways including:

- temporary closure of workplaces and schools
- inability to attend work due to road closures
- managing home and contents before, during and after the disaster
- personal loss including damages to property
- personal illness or injury
- evacuation
- participation in emergency service or Reserve activities
- recall from leave and/or direction to assist with Defence operations associated with natural disaster relief.

Bureau of Meteorology emergency warnings

Bureau of Meteorology and State and Territory emergency warnings are used to identify emergency ratings for bushfires, tropical cyclones, severe weather, tsunamis and major floods.

In the event of a declared catastrophic bushfire emergency, State and Territory emergency management agencies will recommend evacuation of identified localities as the best option for survival - these may include workplaces, employee properties or access to these. Fire danger ratings issued by the Bureau of Meteorology range from Low-Moderate to Catastrophic or 'code red'. Fire danger ratings issued by designated fire agencies in each State and Territory may vary and should be referred to for affected localities in the event of a catastrophic emergency.

Major flooding involves significant inundation which results in road and property closures. Flood warnings are issued by the Bureau of Meteorology. Flooding is rated on a scale from minor to major. In the event of major flooding, extensive land areas are inundated, properties and towns are likely to be isolated and major traffic routes likely to be closed. Evacuation of people from flood affected areas may be required.
Access to leave

Access to miscellaneous leave provisions may be granted to Defence personnel in the event of a natural disaster affecting their workplace or home taking into account the specific circumstances of the warning issued.

Refer to the APS People Policy - Miscellaneous Leave for further detail of each defined leave type and purpose - Pages - Miscellaneous Leave

All leave absences are to be recorded on PSS or a PA052 leave application form and approved by the appropriate delegate.

These arrangements should apply until the responsible state or territory emergency management authority declares that the emergency or disaster warning has passed.

Where an employee is already on pre-approved leave during a disaster or emergency, then the employee remains absent from work on that pre-approved leave.

Where there is no declared emergency or evacuation recommendation an employee would generally be expected to cover their absence from the workplace by use of flex, time off in lieu, annual leave, long service leave (noting minimum use of seven calendar days) or miscellaneous leave for private purposes without pay.

Leave provisions - APS

Employees who have a requirement to provide care of their immediate family or household member due to an unexpected emergency (for example where a school or child care centre closure is a consequence of their location in a locality subject to an emergency warning) may be granted miscellaneous leave – exceptional circumstances at the rate of full pay, half pay or without pay up to a maximum of two days absence per occurrence.

Employees are also entitled to take personal/carers leave to care for or support an immediate family member or household member affected by an unexpected emergency.

Employees who volunteer for an emergency management activity in response to a declared natural disaster and wish to access miscellaneous leave – emergency service or community activity are required to provide documentation to support their participation and also verify the nature of the organisation they are volunteering with. In most instances they will be working for a recognised emergency service or organisation which has a role under an emergency management plan prepared by a Commonwealth State or Territory government for coping with emergencies and/or disasters. It includes fire fighting, civil defence and rescue bodies which secure the safety or people, animals and/or property in a natural disaster or emergency.

Flexible work arrangements may assist in a variety of circumstances including where workplaces are unavailable due to being directly affected by a natural disaster and/or are inaccessible due to road closures or it would be too dangerous for an employee or member to travel to work. They may also be beneficial following the period of immediate emergency when affected personnel are returning to work and managing their personal circumstances following their absence due to the disaster.

Flexible work arrangements such as working part-time hours, working from home and working from an alternative location could all be considered when making decisions regarding personnel who are absent from the workplace as a result of a natural disaster.
Where possible, Australian Defence Force (ADF) members affected by a natural disaster are to make contact with their administrative unit in the first instance.

This table describes the types of leave that would apply in the listed situations.
